By Jean Kinkead, Women's Consultant, The Travelers Insurance Companies Holiday Accident-Proofing

Women in the know make a practice of accident-proofing their families and their house-holds for the Christmas holidays.

-those partaking of Yuletide cheer are to be the passengers, not the drivers. (Taxis are in order when all hands are celebrating.)

If there are older family members visiting, some simple pre-cautions are taken for their safety. There are no scatter rugs safety. There are no scatter rugs or tippy furniture in their rooms; there is accessible lighting and perhaps a flashlight on their night table; their medicines are kept completely separate from all other medicines. A small night light may be left on in their room at night, and the bathroom light will be left burning for their convenience. Family pets are kept under strict control during the visit!

Safety experts have said that, where children are concerned, the best safety device is a rested, cheerful mother, and women in the know agree with them. To forestall the mishaps that occur when mom is a wreck, they catnap when the children nap, stop for tea and cookies when the kiddies are having their milks kiddies are having their milk break, drop everything and take a good brisk walk at least once a good brisk walk at least once a day.

Women in the know give some special attention to their Christmas decorations, too. Since poinsettia leaves and mistletoe berries are deadly poison, they are kept well out of reach of small fry. The Christmas tree stand contains a receptacle for water so the tree cannot become danger. the tree cannot become danger-ously dried out. And stockings are not hung before a lighted fire on Christmas evel nper Insurance has been saving careful drivers real money on non-compulsicoverages in Massachusetts for years. This year alone, Kemper policyholders who drive new popular-priced autos will save as much as $55% or more when they renew their full reversing nalicies in 1953 thanks their full coverage policies in 1968, thanks to a big dividend on 1967 non-compulsory coverages and new low rates on property damage liability, comprehensive and collision coverages for 1968. Even policy-holders with liability coverage only will realize substantial savings.

In addition, through the Kemper Insurance Plan, you can budget your insurance premi-ums, spreading the cost over eight payments. The savings shown above are based on the lowest rate classification for full coverage comprehensive, $50 deductible collision and $5,000 property demage liability for a new popular-priced sedan.

Believe it or not!! I finished up the Mass. deer season without seeing a deer in the woods. heard two deer take off when I was driving an area in Tolland for the fellows that were on post. Two does walked past Rich Mur-phy, of Feding Hills, and the buck that accompanied them went the other way.

Rumors were flying high and wide about the large number of does that were being found in the woods dead. I take these reports with a grain of salt. No doubt a few deer were shot by Jerks that have to shoot anything that moves. Thank the Lord that they are in the minority. If the hunters will give this partial buck haw a chance, a large deer herd will materialize in the next five years in Mass. We have the land (60% of Mass. is -wooded) food to support a large herd of deer and enough hunters to harvest the surplus.

Not all hunters are as black as some writers paint them to be. For example: At Boscawen, New Hampshire, where Helenette Sil-ver carries on deer nutrition re-book ever published. The 22nd search for the New Hampshire edition contains over 40 new and original, carefully researched arbucks tore a hole in the fence allowing one of the does to escape hunting, firearms, gun collecting, handleding authorities on the project of the least of th right in the middle of the hunting target shooting, handloading, anseason. These deer are specially trained to submit to laboratory tests, at considerable trouble and expense, and loss of one is disheartening to say the least. Both Mrs. Silver and the Department are grateful for the cooperation of these hunters, who definitely don't feel chliged to shoot everything that TV ISN'T ALWAYS RIGHT A conservation officer in New Hampshire found a fawn deer with spots fading lying over 100 feet from a highway. Close examination revealed that someone had placed a large gauze compress over a long gash on the animal's chest and bound it up with 3-inch olive drab tape.

Tracks in the grass indicated that the deer had apparntly been carrid to the spot where it died. A fisherman in the area said he had seen the deer alive earlier. The deer was probably hit by a car. The driver of the car evidently tried to treat it.

The officer says this reminds him of "part of a Daktari TV program—that it was thoughtful of the motorist, but it doesn't work off the silver screen."

The Perfect Christmas Gift

Just about this time, the annual Christmas present puzzle of what to give those nearest and dearest on your Christmas list may find you in a quandry. Even the children seem to have every-thing they need or want, from bicycles to Bea-tle records. If this is a problem in your house, why not try my solution. I "make" my family a merrier Christmas.

A Gift With All The Trimmings

It's so easy for example to give a little one a gift with all the trimmings by presenting him with a brand-new bedroom. Take your child on a Jungle Safari and watch him have a whole ma-nagerie of fun. First, in the corner of the room nearest the bed, make a tree out of crepe paper or paint. Then, from heavy green construction paper, cut out leaves and glue them onto the tree. Next, spread the bed with Bates' Jungle Junket bedspread -gaily designed with amusing and colorful "wild" animals. Cafe curtains or a headboard to match can be made from this same bed-spread material. A little straw monkey hanging impishly from the ceiling and your child's fa-vorite stuffed animals put the finishing touches to this roomful of African atmosphere.

Carnaby Street, U.S.A.

Teens love this sort of gift, too. This year, for my own teen's Christmas, I'm planning to bring Carnaby Street to her room—in a wild, vivid decor. The method to the modness starts with lots of bright colors. I'll use Bates Piping Peak bedspread, in a lusgious bright colors. I'll use Bates Piping Rock bedspread—in a luscious shade of parrot green with a bold headboard covered in slick black vinyl to set off the color. The new transparent vinyl pillows, a fluffy fake fur rug, and loads of jumbo vari-colored paper flowers will finish my task with virtually no effort. Why not try this unusual kind of present this Christmas? It's for sure this will be one gift that won't be opened, then forgotten or broken after Christmas morning.

Experienced Workers

The older worker, a valuable asset in the nation's work force, is sometimes overlooked. Management would do well to utilize the reservoir of talent that these mature people represent, particularly in this labor-short period.

Secretary of Labor Wirtz recognized a fundamental truth when he said: "A strong and viable economy is the most important single factor improving employment prospects for middle-aged and older workers who lose their jobs. The more vigorous the economy—the higher the lovel of activity and the lovel of a higher the level of activity and the more rapid the rate of growth, the better the employment opportunities for workers of all ages."

Today excellent progress is being made by the voluntary route, as many firms have dropped bans on hiring older people. These firms have learned to place high value on older men and women.

Twenty-three states and Puerto Rico have already adopted laws prohibiting age discrimination. All but three of these laws have been passed since 1955, most of them since 1960; such legislation exists in the major industrial states and covers more than half the nation's industrial workers. The states are taking affirmative action to resolve this problem at their level.

More significant progress can be made through voluntary efforts as more employers recognize the values older workers offer-seasoned experience, judgment, stability and good attendance records. They truly constitute a valuable asset in the nation's work force.

Another reason for popularity of the nickel is that it supplied so many basic enjoyments for so long — a candy bar, a soft drink, chewing gum, an ice cream cone, a hot dog, a phone cream cone, a not dog, a prone call, or a seat at a silent movie. And while many prices are higher these days, there are still numerous items that can be purchased for a nickel.

1866," says Yeoman, "in an attempt to establish a popular coin with long-lasting qualities that was easy to handle."

From 1866-73, two types of five-cent coins were made: small silver pieces called "half dimes" and larger pieces made of 75 per cent copper and 25 per cent nickel.
